

Zui sont-ils ?

Adnan Mazarei

Deputy Director

Middle East and Central Asia Department, IMF

Adnan Mazarei is Deputy Director of the Middle East and Central Asia Department (MCD) at the International Monetary Fund (IMF). He has extensive policy experience in the Middle East and has worked on economic policy for a large number of countries in that region. He also served as mission chief for Pakistan—one of the IMF's key crisis countries. He now oversees the work on a number of countries in the region, as well as MCD's strategy and communications. In the late 1990s, Mr. Mazarei was involved in the resolution of the financial crises in the Philippines and Russia. He has also made important contributions to the IMF's policy work, including international financial architecture and debt issues, as well as recent work on sovereign wealth funds. He has published a number of articles on the economies of the Middle East. He co-edited Economics of Sovereign Wealth Funds, Issues for Policy Makers. Additionally, he served for four years as an adviser to IMF management. Mr. Mazarei has also worked at The World Bank. He has published work on economic issues in the Middle East and is currently editing a book on sovereign wealth funds. Mr. Mazarei received a Ph.D. in economics from the University of California, Los Angeles. Deputy Director of the Middle East and Central Asia Department (MCD) at the International Monetary Fund (IMF). He has extensive policy experience in the Middle East and has worked on economic policy for a large number of countries in that region. He holds a Ph.D. from UCLA.

Bjoern Rother

Adviser

Middle East and Central Asia Department, IMF

Bjoern Rother is an Advisor, Chief of the Strategy and Partnership Unit, and also Mission Chief for Turkmenistan, in the Middle East & Central Asia Department at the International Monetary Fund in Washington, DC. He is the author of "The Determinants of Currency Crises: A Political Economy Approach." His interests include frameworks in support of economic transitions and of inclusive, sustainable growth. He worked previously as a consultant with McKinsey & Company Inc., and holds a Doctorate in Economics from the Free University of Berlin.